

Eligible Bachelor's: A Look Into Single Parenthood and Educational Attainment

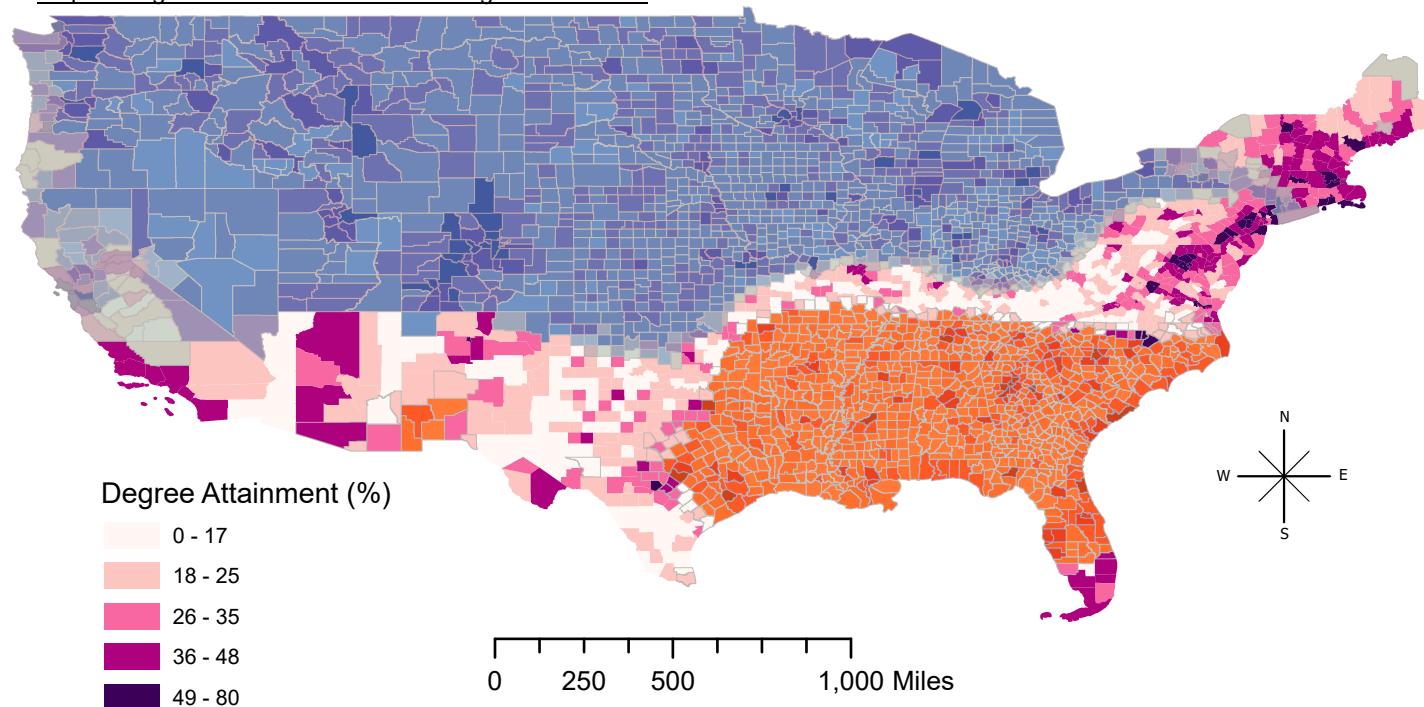

This map illustrates the relationship between concentrations of single-parent households and bachelor's degree attainment rates across U.S. counties. Areas with higher concentrations of single-parent households often overlap with regions reporting lower levels of degree attainment. The visualization suggests a potential inverse correlation, highlighting how family structure may intersect with educational outcomes at the county level.

- Cold Spot (95 to 99 % Confidence)
- Neither
- Hot Spot (95 to 99 % Confidence)

See accompanying poster for Florida information.

Map 1: Single Mothers and Bachelor's Degree Attainment

Map 2: Single Fathers and Bachelor's Degree Attainment

